Inmbia and Greenville, Representatives from several towns along the Road were present and the Southern Railroad was represented by Messrs, Hardwick, Wells and Cardwell. Petitions from all the towns along the road were presented to the officials and the were presented to the officials and the calls are endless extension of Walllumbia and Greenville. Representapointed out by the delegates present, who urged that the train desired would not only benefit the road but the cities and towns along the line. As is already known the question is only the extension of the train from Prosperity, its present terminus, to Columbia. The needle of this section was also as the train from Prosperity in the little of the section is and towns along the line. The present terminus, to Columbia. The present terminus, to Columbia. The called to make one believe there is culated to make one believe there is hope it will be put on. The railroad officials say it will not pay. Perhaps it will not at first, but we believe the business of the road can be inereased, and in a short while the

The pessimist is abroad in the land. On every hand the ear of the passer-by on every hand the ear of the passer-by is assailed by tales of wor, touching upon almost every known topic, from the low price of cotton to the ruinous policy pursued by the government in ability shown by the distinguished abi the recent war with Spain. In fact, it attorney and financier, Hon. T. C. Seems, that a great many trouble are Dickinson, of Washington, D. C., who seems that a great many people are imbaed with the idea that we are every one, separately and individually, on the high road to rain and that the country (in this locality, at least) is country (in this locality, at least) is fast approaching the "demnition bowwows." But let us pause a moment. Is there really a good and sufficient reason for all this pessimistic talk? Are the clouds that are now hovering a portion of our fair Southland really so dark as they are painted by some of our friends with the gloomy cast of countenance? No! most emphatically, no! We cite in proof of this denial the lessons which the history of our country teaches us, the indisputable axioms

The genuine article of Southern hospitality was dished out to the inspection party in alopathic doses. If there are any cleverer people on the outside of the earth than those at Knoxville and Maryland, Tenn., Clayton, Ga., Franklin, N. C., and Anderson, Beaufort and Port Royal, South Carolina, we confess we have never met them try teaches us, the indisputable axioms of political economy and best of all, the logic of common sense. The equalization of values is a fact not a theory; and the same rule applies to existing conditions. If the farmer finds he cannot make a fiving raising four-cent cotton with his present system of farming, he must change his system; raise corn and hogs and plant just enough cotton to supply him with clothing and pay his personal debts. By pursuing such a policy for awhile the price of cotton will be bound to react. Human life is a scries of ups and downs. Every community has them and we cannot hope to escape our share of the "downs." Let us not despair, but as troubles arise meet them unflinchingly, and we will be rewarded by having peace, prosperity and plenty in the land.

The plan generally discussed is flat such a board should be composed of representatives from each of the States of the Union, the members of which should, of course, be experienced and trustworthy members of the medical fraternity, the head of such a board to be known as "commissioner of public health." The subject is one worthy of discussion, and there is much in it to merit consideration on the part of Congress.
